1. Answer the following questions in about 150 words each: $(10 \times 5 = 50)$

- (a) Discuss Plato's theory of justice
- (b) Aristotle on Government & its Classification
- (c) Hobbesian Social Contract.
- (d) Discuss M.N. Roy's concept of Radical Humanism.
- (e) Sex is to Nature as Gender is to Culture. Comment.

~~For Plato, justice is fair harmonious social co-existence. Justice for him is a social code of ethics. It encompasses Greek concept of DIKAIOSYNE (righteousness)~~

~~Plato's concept elevates various other norms of justice in Ancient Greece, such as Cephalous (giving their due), Polymaritus (doing good to friends), Thrasymachus (might is right) and Glaucon (for protection of weak).~~

~~Plato argued that Justice is a feature of SOCIETY, Justice is SUPREME VIRTUE. For him, it is based on satisfaction of soul → doing what one is born / inherently capable of doing.~~

Remarks

(5.3)

For Plato, justice is REASON. Thus, his Myths of Metals, soul Theory and Theory of Education seem to propagate Natural Inequality. This divides society into classes (Producing, Guardians, Ruling). Justice is societal harmony and each class doing their duty. (Functional Specialisation)

Discuss these Points

Criticisms: For Plato, society, state and justice are interchangeable. This was criticised by Popper who called him enemy of open society. His ideal also cannot be applied in today's world as they are a violation of Human Rights and categorical imperatives. It also violates constitutionally guaranteed fundamental rights (A19).

Mention his views

Platonic concept inspired thinkers like Rawls. Popper himself said "one can be Platonic or anti-Platonic but not non-Platonic"

(b) Aristotle is called "Father of Comparative Govt". He under took an empirical study of 158 constitutions.

He doesn't make any distinction between state, government and constitution. He classified government on basis of

- (a) no of persons ruling
- (b) purpose
 - pure (benefit of citizens)
 - perverted (against citizens)

No of persons	Pure	Perverted

Few People	Aristocracy	Oligarchy

(c) ~~The Hobbesian social contract is a mechanistic liberal way of explaining origin of state.~~

~~Hobbes argued that the state of nature was poor, nasty, brutish and short. Men were dominated by passion over reason. There was MATSYAYANA (Might is Right) and every man was his own judge, jury & executioner.~~

Mans enters into social contract to guarantee his life and security by collectively signing away all right. Sabine notes that Hobbes didn't give away right of self preservation to govt formed state.

This legalistic conception of rights gave birth to an absolutist state with monistic sovereignty (Austin). State could function as per procedure established by law. There is no right to revolt.

Criticisms: Locke argued that men's natural right to life, property & liberty were never signed over to state.

It was also criticized by

Marxists as a liberal conception that they were abstractions.

Burke argued "Metaphysical" Social contract was invoked frequently in Black Lives Matter movement to validate civil disobedience and ensure racial justice.

- (d) M.N. Roy was a transitional thinker whose thought changed from Marxism to Radical Democracy to Radical Humanism.

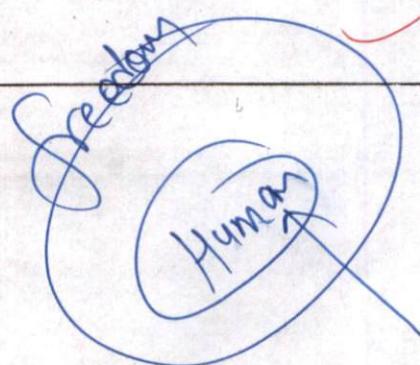

This radical humanism argued for ensuring freedom, rationality and justice by critiquing then models of Communism and Liberal Democracy.

He argued for a system that

- (a) freed mankind from religion and un-scientific superstitions
- (b) inculcation of rational thought
- (c) promotion of scientific temper via education
- (d) cosmopolitanism and rational universal ethics/morality
- (e) established human society in tune with nature/season.

Thus, it argues for a Cultural Renaissance and a cosmopolitan vision of free persons linked by season and humanity.

Remarks

This was considered as a "Remarkable Failure" by Suklijo Kaviraj. Ambedkar remarked that developing reason without justice is not freedom. He argued that Buddhist ideals were rational.

DN Roy's thought is relevant in today's post-truth, morally relative world. It is any a categorical imperative that can be seen as an ideal to strive towards.

(e) Radical feminists like Shulamith Firestone argue that biological sex and cultural gender are different. Gender is social; a woman is made not born.

Simone de Beauvoir in "The Second Sex" argues that existentialist approach should be adopted. According to her, there is a "woman problem" as women have defined within features. This creates "eternal feminine" stereotypes women.

(c) Concept of duty over rights and moral code.

(b) Personal code can be separate

(c) Every citizen has to be willing to perform his/her

(d) No narrow chauvinism

(b) Plato's Theory of Justice was an architectonic concept that had several interdependent parts like communism of property and communism of family.

Plato's argument for just state is an Ideal state run by a Philosopher King. This king is a member of the ruling class who were people of "reason" as specified by Theory of Souls.

To keep philosopher king from being tempted by appetite, Plato suggests communism of property. He argued for abolition of private property for ruling and guardian classes to prevent concentration of power.

He further argues that needs of communism of property includes communism of families. Even men of reason can be disturbed by familial quarrels and sexual jealousy.

Remarks

Thus, the ruling and guardian classes who would be allowed to birth offspring by permission of state only. This would use EUGENICS to ensure best hereditary characteristics.

The children would be taken away immediately under care of state. This had two benefits

(a) children would be brought up and classified by state, on merit with no historical situated advantages

(b) females would be freed from burden of child rearing and could ~~not~~ do their duty to state.

Thus, the two concepts of family & property were linked organically with Plato's Justice Theory. Family was driving force to accumulate property. This would lead to decline of wealth and disturb SOCIAL HARMONY between these classes.

~~good / feel good~~

This was criticised by Aristotle as → Family was a source of pride / virtue and property signified reason. Taking away were taking away thus motivation of people. He thus agreed that this was too idealistic. ~~so~~ He finally stated that "State is highest association for God which means it is a collection of families."

(c) For Aristotle, Ethics and Politics are one and the same.

He argues that ethics is an extension of politics. He argues that politics requires men of reason. This requires them to be virtuous and defines ethics as "what a virtuous man would do" (Agent Theory).

Thus, in this ~~Nichomachean~~
Ethics he argues for developing virtue by doing one's duty to the maximum last Eg: flute (teleological argument)

Remarks

player with talent should play flute and not work in construction.

For Aristotle, the state is a moral organisation for advancing the development of humans. Thus, the state itself gives man an ethical meaning to life.

He further argues that in politics, we can realise ethical life. Those who are men of reason and are suited to politics should use it to do the best of their ability.

He also argues that since man is different from animals and is rational, both politics and ethics apply to man.

This is similar to
Gandhian conception of ethics.
As 'Gandhi' argues 'I do not want politics without ethics'

~~Machiavelli argued for separation of politics and ethics. He argued that human nature was essentially universal egoism.~~

(c) Locke on Defense of Property Rights

(d) Discuss then characteristic features of Aristotle's theory of state.

(a)

~~Theory of Alienation~~ describes mankind's gradual separation from humanity to being an object of exploitation. It was derived from works of young Marx and Gyorgy Lukacs.

Marx describes 4 stages:

- ① alienation from own product
- ② alienation from labour nature by time becoming routine
- ③ alienation from other people / society / Gatheringwesen (species - essere)
- ④ alienation from himself.

Thus this perpetuates the exploitation of capitalist class.

commodity fetishism^b and can be seen as part of Herbert Marcuse's One-Dimensional man (man as consumer).

Marcus's theory of Freedom was not absence of internal/external impediments but "freedoms from necessities". He argued that real freedom was achieved by labour by the man "each according to his ability to each according to his need".

This was a criticism of liberal conception of negative rights. Positive liberals took this concept and formed positive liberty.

Both concepts are relevant in today's consumerist neo-liberal world. Oxfam reports that 1% of world has half of all wealth, and appropriated 80% of new wealth generated in 2019. Thus, Marx is still relevant.

(b) Arendt argued that the modern, centralized bureaucracy state has normalized amoral decision making, which she termed Banality of Evil.

This is in her argument during Eichmann trials in Israel in her book "Eichmann in Jerusalem". She argues that bureaucrats are divorced from morality and disconnected from society. This leads to imperial decisions making thus sanctioning evil.

If can be noted that it was a critique of Weberian bureaucracy. Eichmann's defense for his actions was that he was following orders. He deserved promotion, thus was sanctioned the deaths of thousands.

Arendt argues that the banality of evil is a symptom of modernity. To counter this, she argues for 2007

(c) Locke asserts that his social contracts transfers all natural rights except right to life, liberty and property.

~~Locke argues that the Right to Property is inviolable, sacrosanct and irrefutable. He argued that property was transformed by human labour. Thus, it provides motivation and people should keep their profits as long as they were not by unfair means. (Possessive Individualism)~~

Thus, he is ~~criticized~~ as scholar of Bourgeois class. He also gives right to revolt if state interferes in property rights. Thus he advocates for a ~~right~~ watchman state.

This is seen in neo-liberal thinkers like Hayek, Friedman and Nozick. Nozick even argues that individuals "hire" the state to protect their state for property.

Marxists argue for abolition of property, while Socialists / Social Democrats argue for the return of distributive justice.

Locke's defense has thus created the modern capitalist and influenced concepts like Intellectual Property Rights.

Remarks

Add support of Aristotle's Property Rights

(d) Aristotle argues for the best practicable state, as he is a materialist and empiricist. He argues for an ORGANIC Theory of state.

"State is ~~indeed highest of all associations~~" argues that state is formed of individuals → families → state/government.

He argues that man is by nature a political animal, thus man needs state to escape law of jungle and ensure the good life.

He argues that although man ~~lives~~ ^{lives} before the state, the state is prior to man; as it ensures the path to a good life.

He argues for Golden Mean of Polity as best state. It is the result of classes and the middle opposes ~~downgrading~~ ^{downgrading} as it is populous.

Aristotle also doesn't differentiate between state and government. However, family is distinct from state.

State also has the moral obligation to ensure the good life. State allows man to achieve his development as virtue / full of reason.

This theory differs substantially from modern state, which is separate from government and lacks a moral character.

He also defines revolution as smallest of changes and thus state is for preserving social order and harmony.

Thus, his ideas give the practical best state, while Plato gave the Ideal State as ruled by Philosophos King.

To guarantee safety and ensure self-preservation, Hobbes argues that man went for a social contract that created an absolutist state. The state would be a safeguarder of man's rights, which he couldn't enjoy in state of nature. Man thus signs over all his natural rights except right to self-preservation.

Criticisms:

This was criticised by Locke. He argues that state of nature was peaceful. But man couldn't guarantee safety of property, nor could he devote his full attention to develop himself/ his material wealth. Thus Locke argues that benefits of social contract were for security did not include signing over rights to life, liberty and property.

Remarks

Jean Jacques Rousseau argued that state of nature was bliss. Man used reason in state of nature. It was peaceful because man didn't have private property.

After social contract, man created ^{private} ~~personal~~ property which degenerated society. Only way forward was direct democracy that would deliberate the common / general will.

~~Marxists~~ dismiss state of nature as a liberal fantasy. ~~Conservatives~~ like Burke argue that they are "Metaphysical abstractions". ~~Idealists~~ consider man to have organically evolved state and that there was no state of nature.

~~Social contract~~ has influenced thinkers like Rawls, Nozick and Dworkin to provide scope for justice.

~~However, it was criticised as a "Pig's Philosophy" which tried to combine classical liberalism and utilitarianism to a more humane version. He is thus considered as a bridge between classical and modern liberalism.~~

Remarks

Problems with classical liberalism

① Philosophical basis

- Argued man was individual & atomistic; Barker calls this "abstract individualism"
- Barker also argues that possessive individualism also plays part.

② Practical nature

- Marx criticised exploitations of women, children and proletariat
- Horrible working conditions
- Growth of inequality; it reached its peak in pre-World War I era

③ Moral degradation

- Scholars like Gandhi criticised capitalism for its greed.
- Kant argued against treating humanity as means, argued for humanity as an end.

Remarks

Positive liberalism was seen as the reformations of liberalism with humanity as an end. Scholars like TH. Green, Laski, and Keynes argued that

- (a) man was social as well as individual
- (b) liberty meant development of character to fullest extent
- (c) equality meant substantive and not merely procedural equality of opportunity

Thus, they argued for distributive justice as;

- ① Humanity as an end → Society to work for equality of outcome.
- ② Social harmony required that justice prevention of wealth concentration was necessary
- ③ Emphasis on equality → Dworkin argued that equality trumped liberty as it was more moral.

Remarks

(19.5)

Rawls' justice theory was the epitome of positive liberals' emphasis on distributive justice. This was furthered by Dworkin's emphasis on equality.

However, it became untenable as modern welfare state couldn't keep up with expenditure needed. Habermas called this legitimation crisis. This led to scholars like Friedman, Hayek and Nozick advocating for neo-liberal state, which harked back to laissez-faire concept of classical liberalism.

Post 2008, there is a rise of right and left as well as positive liberalism. Neo-Keynesian economics and welfare measures like unemployment allowance has been given in economies affected by COVID pandemic.

Remarks

(b) Arendt was a critic of modernity. In her books "On Origins of Totalitarianism", "On Human Condition" and "Eichmann in Jerusalem" she has outlined her criticism of modernity.

On Origins of Totalitarianism

She argued that ideology was used in the modern world to justify totalitarianism and violence.

This was because of moral retreat and lack of public participation. Centralised imperial Weberian bureaucracies were abstract from people.

On Human Condition

She argued that humanity was lost. Man has become "animal labour" and "lions of fat".

~~Man had ended political participation. This neglect of political sphere led to rise of demagogue when deep depoliticised masses are enfranchised.~~

~~She also gave concept of Bonsality of Evil in "Eichmann in Jerusalem". Moral abstractness has caused lack of capacity to make critical judgements.~~

~~Zoon Politikon:~~

~~She argued for man to take to public sphere and use action and speak to exercise generate powers and change political system.~~

~~This required people to act in concup, with Nativity (freedom) and plurality. This would lead to change in modern world.~~

Criticisms

~~Positive liberals like Green argue that the modern welfare state would achieve reduction in inequality and lead to empowerment of people.~~

~~Post ~~now~~ Marxists argue that their methodology is scientific and materially situated in history. Thus the revolution was about class ~~defining~~ exploitation, which needed bureaucrats to manage a planned economy.~~

~~Conservatives like Dalacott criticised us by arguing that man's social customs and traditions were the source of knowledge; not reason or by acting in concert.~~

Remarks

(Q. 9)

Neo-liberals argue that impersonal bureaucracies should be down-sized but not changed. Amoral decision making was best and it should be determined by market.

Post-modernists argue that political power doesn't arrive in concert. Foucault talked about "regimes of power" and discourses.

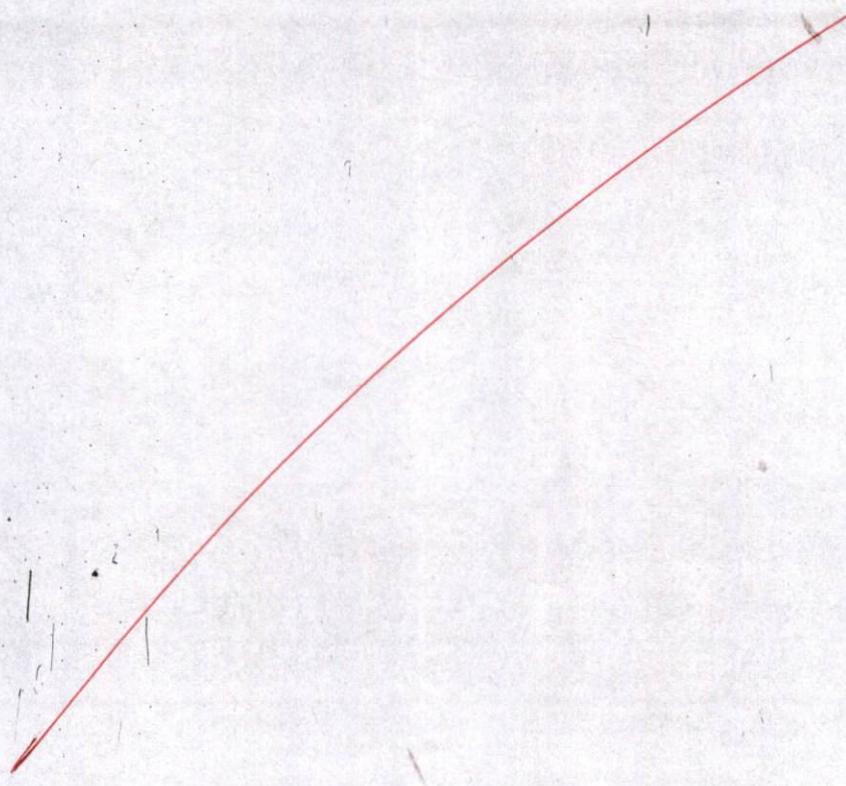

Habermas criticised Arendt by arguing that modernity could be salvaged. But, man needed to be rid of his one-dimensional nature (man as consumer).

Arendt's critique of modernity is still relevant today, but it should be evolved from its modernist perceptions of a grand narrative. Thus, the prescriptions should be altered to include moral relativism.
