1. The Continental Blockade was a misconceived idea of Economically defeating Great Britain. Critically examine. (150 Words) (10 Marks)

Introduction
is valid

Britain was a major naval power and exporter of goods in Europe and other colonies of Britain and it has major trade in Europe continent itself.

Continental Blockade was a Napoleon's strategy to weaken the Britain's export and ultimately to weaken British economy, where by naval power of Britain can be challenged and easily defeated.

Napoleon with the support of Austria, Prussia and Russia established Continental system.

British ships could not import-export with mainland Europe. There so, British exports fell down for some time, but the Continental system backfired on the countries like Russia, there seen scarcity of food products and necessary things.

So, Russia was the first country to walk out from the Continental blockade system of Napoleone.

Remarks

Also Portugal openly refused to join

- British export
reduced to continent and increased towards other side.

- Embargo Act 1807

hurt French
economy
than British

British manage to trade &
export and import from its colonies in Asia and African colonies Africa.

But very few exports and loss of profits
and less availability of raw material
in European countries caused, many industries
closed and resentment among people about Napoleon and its continental blockade system rose.

Continental blockade blockade system failed and later it became one of the reason for down fall of Napoleon.
Due to this popularity of British goods increased in European continent and Napoleon's popularity decreased.
